TO THE PUBLIC.

THE Managers of the ORPHAN HOSPITAL.

Of Edinburgh have found it necessary that an additional wing should be built to the present Hospital House. From the beneficence of the public, this charity has maintained and educated, since its commencement, a very great number of orphans. It extends to orphans of every denomination within the limits of the British dominions; and for several years past, the number of children received into it has been annually increased. The Managers have been enabled to raise a capital fund to the Hospital, which, with the annual donations bestowed on it, may be sufficient to support a permanent establishment. They think they can appeal to the Public for the fidelity with which the management of this Hospital has been conducted; and are persuaded that there is not a charity in this city in which more attention has been given to the substance, the morals, or the education of children. The Hospital maintains at present 130 orphans, who are trained up in the habits of industry, and are faithfully instructed in the principles of religion. The Managers are anxious to render the institution more extensively useful: But the present building being now fully occupied, the want of accommodation prevents them from increasing the present number of children, though their annual funds would otherwise enable them to provide for them. They have been obliged, with much regret, for two years past, to reject many applications for children in the most destitute circumstances, whom nothing but the impossibility of finding accommodation for them would have prevailed on them to exclude. But they are so much convinced of the utility of the institution, and have so much compassion for the multitude of orphans for whom they are solicited, that they have at last resolved to enlarge the Hospital House, by building an additional wing. It is computed, that, on the most economical plan, the expense will amount to about seven or eight hundred pounds Sterling; and the proposed addition would enable the Managers to accommodate in all about 250 children. The Public will be sensible that this expense cannot be defrayed out of the capital stock, or the annual revenue of the Hospital, without defeating the very ends for which the additional building is intended, and even in some degree diminishing the present utility of the Hospital. The Managers find themselves under a necessity of relying on the public beneficence, to which this charity has been indebted for all its prosperity and usefulness. They apply with some confidence to those who have been witnesses of the gradual progress of the institution, and are persuaded that those who may be induced to enquire into the real advantages to society which the enlargement of this Hospital will secure, will not think the contributions to this design an improper exercise of Christian charity. The Public may rely on the faithful application of the sums intrusted to the Managers, who are fully convinced that future generations will derive advantages from them, which will be long and gratefully remembered.

Contributions will be received by Mr Scott-Moncrieff, Treasurer, and by any of the following Managers of the Hospital: Dr Gregory Grant physician in Edinburgh; the Rev. Mr David Johnston minister of North Leith; Sir H. Moncrieff minister of St Cuthbert's; Bailie James Gentle brewer in Canongate; Mr Thomas Tod merchant in Edinburgh; Mr John Caw in the Excise; Bailie Daniel Miller merchant in Canongate; and Mr William Dickson in Edinburgh; either of whom will grant receipts, if required.

St James's, January 9. 1781.

THIS day arrived Lieutenant Waugh, of the Invalids, at the Earl of Hillsborough's office, with letters from Lieutenant Governor Irving, of Guernsey, inclosing a letter to him from Lieutenant Governor Corbet, of the island of Jersey, dated Jersey, January 6. 1781, of which the following is an extract:

I AM now to acquaint you, That the French landed this morning, about two o'clock, between two posts, so distant, that the guards did not perceive them. They marched across the roads, and were in the market-place by six this morning. I was taken prisoner about seven; but I was fortunately released by the very brave and steady behaviour of the troops and militia; and the Commandant then informed me, that they surrendered prisoners of war: They were all taken, killed, or wounded. Poor Major Picrion, exerting himself at the head of a brave troop of followers, at the close of this affair, was unfortunately killed.

P. S. We have about 500 prisoners. Some hundreds are killed, and about 100 wounded. The rest left their arms, and are fled into the country; but I hope to have them all to-morrow.

Our loss may be 50 killed, and perhaps half that number wounded.

My friend Mulcafter has, as usual, exerted himself. I am not hurt; but two shots through my hat.

I shall transmit particulars to-morrow morning to England; but send this if you can.

From the London Gazette, Jan. 9.

Admiralty-Office, January 9. 1781.

Copy of a letter from the Honourable Captain Keith Elphinstone, of the Warwick, to Mr Stephens, dated at Spithead the 7th instant.

I HAVE the honour to inform the Board of the arrival of his Majesty's ship under my command, and of my having cruised, in company with the Edgar and Maidstone, on the station pointed out by my orders; also that on the 5th instant, having parted company from the above ships, I fell in with, engaged, and took a two-deck ship under Dutch colours (after having admonished her Commander to surrender without effect). She is the Rotterdam, belonging to the States-General, of 50 guns and 300 men, commanded by Mynheer Volbergen, eleven days from Holland, bound to the West Indies; they had been twice attacked before this period; I had the good fortune to lose no men; the sails, masts, and rigging are cut to pieces. I have great satisfaction in acknowledging the obligation I am under to the officers of each ship.

The ship's company, notwithstanding their being young in service, and reduced in number by the several Dutch vessels we had manned and sent into port, conducted themselves with becoming spirit and activity.

I am, &c.

O. K. ELPHINSTONE.

Extract of a letter from Lord Mulgrave, Captain of the Courageux, to Mr Stephens, dated Spithead, 8th instant.

I ARRIVED here this morning with La Minerve, French frigate of 32 guns and 316 men, taken by the Courageux, in company with the Valiant, on the 4th of this month, about three in the afternoon, Ushant bearing east, distant 14 leagues. She had sailed from Brest on the 3d, with La Fine, L'Aigrette, and La Diligente, to cruise for a fortnight off Scilly. The Chevalier de Grimouard, who commanded her, did not strike till she had been for about an hour under the fire of our broadside, within musquet shot. From the ship being so near each other, the few shot fired by the frigate in the course of that time necessarily took place, by which the Courageux had ten men killed and seven wounded. The fore-mast, mizen-mast, and bowsprit, are damaged. On board La Minerve, Monf. Andrieu, one of the Lieutenants, and 49 men, were killed, and 23 wounded, amongst whom it is with great concern that I mention the Chevalier Grimouard and his nephew Monf. Nollay, both I fear very dangerously. All her masts were rendered unserviceable, and the hull much damaged. The Valiant parted from us in chase of one of the other frigates. The disabled situation of the prize made it absolutely necessary to tow her into port.

From the London Papers, Jan. 9.

Hague, Jan. 2. On the 26th of last month the Prince Stadtholder informed the assembly of the States-General, that last year he had communicated to the respective provinces, his opinion, that from 50 to 60 ships should be equipped, and the land forces augmented to 50,000 or 60,000 men.

That the frontier places be put in a proper state of defence, and the magazines provided with necessary ammunition, for the maintenance of the Republic in its lawful rights: That he had seen with pleasure the marine was put in some measure in a better state, and he flattered himself, that as we cannot be too much on our guard, the States of all the Provinces will reinforce it with redoubled ardour for the next year: That it was equally necessary for the Republic to be put into a convenient state of defence by land; and hoped, that they would seriously think of augmenting the fortifications, and providing the necessary magazines, and that the respective provinces will resolve on these measures, otherwise he could not answer for the consequences, and he considered it as his duty to lay before the eyes of the confederates the true situation of the Republic; that nothing may be imputed to him, as he had given timely precaution, in case the Republic should suffer any damage by neglect.

His Most Serene Highness having received the thanks of their High Mightinesses for his assiduous zeal and care for maintaining the State in the enjoyment of its liberty and independence, it was resolved, That what had just been proposed and represented be communicated to the respective Provinces; that his Most Serene Highness, animated by the purest love for his country, now insults, and with reason, considering that danger threatens, and war appears inevitable, that they unite all their efforts against the imminent danger, and thereby, conjointly with courage and prudence, preserve the Republic from it; that the marine is not yet sufficient to protect, in all its branches, our commerce, the source of the welfare of the State, and to cover, against all attacks, our possessions in the East and West Indies. From these motives their High Mightinesses are obliged to treat the confederates, in the most amicable and pressing manner, to fix, as soon as possible, their attention on these objects, seeing that the storm arising at sea may very easily, by an unexpected turn, be carried to the continent; and consequently that an augmentation in the land forces is as necessary as in the marine: That therefore their High Mightinesses flatter themselves, that as the choice of peace or war is no longer in their power, the respective confederates will attempt every means to defend with union, energy, and cordiality, their dear country, with all that is precious and valuable therein.

L O N D O N.

Yesterday some dispatches were received at Lord G. Germain's office, from South Carolina, which were brought over in the Hercules, Captain Buller, arrived at Torbay. This vessel sailed from Charleston on the 28th of November, and it is said, brings advice, that Lieutenant Colonel Tarleton, at the head of 500 men, had, by forced marches, come up with, and attacked the rebel Brigadier General Sumpter, who took post on an advantageous height, with 1000 rebel troops, 700 of which were killed on the spot. Sumpter himself was dangerously wounded, and but few of his army escaped from the fury of the British troops. Lord Cornwallis, it is said, had got back to Charlestown, when the above dispatches came away.

The following extract from the Carolina Gazette of Nov. 27, confirms the account respecting Lieutenant Colonel Tarleton, inserted above:—"On the 20th of November, at a place called Wormbergh, Colonel Tarleton, with a legion of horse, consisting of one hundred and ninety, and eighty foot, belonging to a regiment of regulars, making in the whole two hundred and seventy, by forced marches, came up with the rear of Sumpter's army, which he immediately engaged, and killed every man of them, then pursued the main body, which had taken post on a high hill near a town named Nourie; the Colonel, with his horse, soon drove them from their situation, killing great numbers of them. The Americans left their baggage, cannon, military stores, and provision-waggons, and fled. The messenger who brought the above news said, that Colonel Tarleton had pursued them, and if the day light had continued long enough would have destroyed every man of them. Gen. Sumpter had one thousand men, and was much wounded in the flight."

Yesterday advice was received by a ship which ran it from Barbadoes that four ships arrived safe at that place from Halifax, laden with lumber and provisions, the 26th of October, which gave a comfortable relief to the inhabitants.

It is said the Thunderer man of war is safe arrived at Barbadoes.

It was confidently asserted last night, that a gentleman near Cavendish-square had received a letter from his son on board the Thunderer, which, with the Stirling-Castle, were arrived at New-York.

A vessel arrived at Montego Bay a few days previous to the Alert cutter's sailing from Jamaica; the Captain of which says he saw the Thunderer man of war, Hon. R. B. Wallingham, within a few days sail of New-York. She was quite a wreck, being entirely dismantled, and her guns thrown overboard.

Yesterday morning a messenger was dispatched from the Secretary of State's office, to his Majesty's minister at the court of Berlin, charged with matters of the greatest importance, in answer to the dispatches received on Friday evening.

A strong squadron is ordered for the Downs station, as the rupture with the Dutch renders it necessary to have as respectable a fleet there as at any period of the last war.

From Versailles we learn, that his Excellency the Dutch Ambassador applied to the Court on the 27th ult. for the assistance of several cruizers to be stationed on the coasts of the United States, by way of courtesy only, not making any formal requisition by order of their High Mightinesses, and that his request was complied with.

The capture of the two Dutch men of war is a most lucky circumstance at this crisis, not only as it increases our naval force in the same degree that it lessens that of our new enemy; but as they are vessels also which will be found particularly useful on the Dutch coast, on account of the easy draft of water they make.

As there are several British and Irish seamen constantly in the Dutch ships, we shall, by our numerous captures, obtain several seamen of that description, whose services are now particularly wanted.

They write from Pensacola, that a violent gale of wind had done a great deal of damage amongst the shipping in the Gulf of Mexico, and that amongst the ships lost were two Spanish men of war of 74 guns each.

The person apprehended as a spy on Friday evening, goes by the name of De la Motte, with the title of Baron annexed to it, and has for some time past resided at Mr Otley's, an eminent woollen draper in Bond Street, at a rent of one hundred pounds per annum. At the time the officers entered Mr Otley's house, the Baron was out of town, but had left a man servant in his apartments, who, together with every person in the house, was taken into a kind of temporary custody, no one being suffered to go out of the house, Mr Otley excepted. The Baron did not return till late on Friday evening, which was two days after the officers had been waiting for him; he came home in a post chaise; and, to prevent any suspicion arising, his own servant was permitted to open the door to him. Care was immediately taken to secure the doors; and at that instant his servant informed him he had been in custody for two days. On this information he endeavoured to destroy some papers which he had in his pockets, but was luckily prevented by one of the officers, who instantly seized him: A scuffle ensued, and had not there been more assistance, it is most probable an escape might have been effected. Being properly secured, and all his papers taken, he was privately conveyed to Lord Hillsborough's office, where he underwent a long examination, and was the same evening committed a close prisoner to the Tower.

Mr Otley underwent an examination at the Secretary of State's office, touching his knowledge of his lodger; and gave the most clear and satisfactory account of his manner and behaviour, during his residence in his house. Mr Otley was then replied to in the politest terms, and thanked for his upright and judicious behaviour, in conducting himself so prudently as not to let this important transaction transpire, until such time as he was safely secured.

The papers taken from Baron de la Motte, are reported to be of the highest importance, they leave no doubt of his being the identical person who has so indefatigably and industriously been the immediate means of coming at the knowledge of our SIGNALS, which the French have of late, with so much success, made use of to the great astonishment of this country. Among his papers are particular lists of every ship of force in any of our yards or docks, the complement of men they have on board at the time of their sailing, with remarks of their being well manned, when short of the stipulated number, &c. he has even gone so far as to furnish the most accurate lists of the seamen in the different hospitals at Portsmouth and Plymouth. If this should turn out to be a fact, which we have not the smallest doubt but it will, the mystery is at once explained how our ships are captured, and our schemes frustrated, while such gentlemen as these are suffered to exist.

In consequence of the intelligence procured by the apprehension of De la Motte, a messenger was dispatched about eleven o'clock on Friday night, to apprehend a Henry Lutterloh, Esq; of Wickham, near Portsmouth, on suspicion of high treason. This Mr Lutterloh is a German, and has been in America, an officer in one of the German regiments. Some time ago he settled at Wickham, a small town about eight miles from Portsmouth, at which a number of the officers belonging to the Dock-houses, and keep a pack of hounds, and spend the greatest part of the day, it seems, Mr Lutterloh, by taking a genteel and confidence; and, in footing, he had a Public Office clock in the morning go a hunting, but shifted all his drawers and Bank to 1. greatest part of their leisure and social hours. Into this society, it seems, Mr Lutterloh found means to introduce himself, by taking a genteel house, and keeping a set of hunters. He received his intelligence from them in their hours of enjoyment and confidence; and by being on the most intimate and friendly footing, he had free access to all the magazines and storehouses in the yard. The messenger, attended by Mr Clarke of the Public Office in Bowstreet, got to his house about seven o'clock in the morning, just as he was going to mount his horse to go a hunting. He showed no sign of an embarrassment or fear; but shifted his dress, and gave the messengers the keys of all his drawers and chests, with the utmost readiness and composure. His papers were all secured. There were ready cash and Bank notes in the scrutoire to the amount of about 100l. The notes which he had in his possession were all 10l. ones, and those of Piquets were 15l. notes; and what is singular, and serves to shew the communication, they were all drawn payable to the same person, and dated from the Bank on the same day. He was brought to town on Saturday evening, but too late to be examined that night. The box containing his papers was therefore locked up and sealed, and the key delivered to himself; and yesterday at two o'clock he was brought up to Lord Hillsborough's Office, where he underwent an examination of two hours and a half. The result of that examination we are not acquainted with, but he was delivered again into the custody of the messenger. He seemed himself to be confident that no proof could be brought of guilt against him from his papers.

It is said, that another messenger was, on Friday night, dispatched in search of a person in the neighbourhood of Plymouth, who was connected with the same party, but he is not yet returned.

Monsieur De la Motte, who was committed a close prisoner for High Treason, arrived at the Tower between eleven and twelve on Friday night. He is secured in the apartments which were occupied by Lord Ferrers; and the gate way in which Dr Cameron was confined, is already prepared for the reception of his friend and correspondent, Mr Lutterloh, who resides near Portsmouth. Mons. De la Motte is a remarkable handsome man, middle aged, and about six feet high. He has said he is a brother to an Admiral of France. He wept much on Saturday, and is at present in extreme low spirits. But whether those tears flowed from the tender feelings of a husband and father, or from apprehensions of guilt, or from the terror impressed on his mind by a confinement in our Bastille, cannot now be ascertained. His address and deportment denote him to be a man of quality.

Thursday last, a man, named Roger, and a Mrs Dobrey, (with whom he cohabited,) were apprehended at their lodgings in Greek-street, Soho square, in consequence of an information lodged against them, charging them with having conveyed various packets of intelligence to France, by way of Margate and Ostend. After a long examination, they were both committed to prison.

Another person, (a foreigner) was yesterday apprehended, on a suspicion of a similar nature, and, after an examination before Lord Hillsborough, was committed.

It seems that De la Motte was under such trepidations, during his examination, that he gave the fullest discovery of his accomplices. The man and the wife, who were first apprehended, it is said, will be admitted as evidence for the Crown, and from them there will be the clearest proof of his having sent dispatches to the enemy.

Ministry are in hourly expectation of the arrival of a messenger who was sent to Plymouth in search of another of the people concerned in giving intelligence to the enemy.

The Secretary of one of our Admirals is taken up, being one of those concerned in conveying intelligence to the enemy, and connected with the people in custody. It will be no longer a mystery how the enemy became acquainted with our private signals.

EDINBURGH.

In our last, we had the pleasure of laying before our readers, a complete and authentic list of the Dutch navy, now in commission; their weight of metal, and commanders names; with a specific account of those now at home, or on foreign stations; also, the precise time of sailing of such of them as have been lately ordered abroad, with their particular destination. This important intelligence will not be found in any other paper published at so early a period.

In the hostilities now commenced with the Dutch, Ministry cannot be accused of temerity. We are well informed, that a naval Captain, high in the esteem of his country for bravery and professional knowledge, was employed to go to Holland in disguise, in order to make himself master of the situation of their dock-yards and shipping. This necessary and important piece of business he undertook, and happily accomplished to his utmost wish, without being discovered. He was in Holland a fortnight, where there was not a dock-yard or ship that he did not inspect with the utmost minuteness. Our readers may readily believe, that the report delivered by the Captain did not place the Dutch navy, or their abilities soon to increase it, and put it on a respectable footing, in the most conspicuous point of view, as two days did not elapse after his arrival when the Manifesto against Holland made its appearance. Minority, therefore, may bawl out as much as they please against a Dutch war; we are persuaded this country has nothing to fear from it, so long as proper officers are employed, and Lee-shore Admirals kept from the command of our fleets.

Extract of a letter from London, January 9.
"The Dutch, contrary to the expectations that were formed, have irrevocably determined upon a war with Great Britain, the grand object of which is to humble the power of her navy, which the States say, have, for some time past, dictated to the rest of the world with an arrogance as unjust as it was insufferable. To this end, the House of Bourbon, it is said, mean to give every assistance in its power to Holland, and an invasion by the united forces of these three enemies is already threatened to be attempted against England in the Spring. The measure, however, should it be attempted, will hardly be suffered by the other powers of Europe."

Major Pearson, who is mentioned as killed by the Extraordinary Gazette, was a nephew to General Pearson, who commanded last year at Warley Camp, and second in command at Jersey.

No account is yet received from Sir James Wallace, who is expected to be there by this time, as the wind has been fair ever since he sailed from Portsmouth.

The expedition of the French against the Isle of Jersey, was of much greater extent than hath appeared: the spirited conduct of the troops on the island and militia having happily crushed it in the onset. An infinite number of troops, it appears, were ready for embarkation in Concarre Bay, and it was intended, that after the first quota, which effected a landing on Saturday morning, had possessed themselves of the town of St Helier, and the landing places, that each night a reinforcement to a considerable amount should follow and be disembarked, till the whole number was so large as to have rendered all resistance fruitless. The capture of the Isle of Jersey was planned as a diversion, and intended to prevent this country from sending her navy to the relief of Gibraltar.

"Poul play is suspected on the part of some persons in trust on the Isle of Jersey. Certain it is, that the French had information from the island, when was the most likely moment for them to catch the garrison napping."

"The spirited and valiant conduct of the Jerseymen on Saturday last, is a second instance of their loyalty to their Royal Master, their love of liberty, their zeal for their country's welfare, and their detestation of French Government, which is but another phrase for despotism and tyranny. By their successful efforts, France has again been baffled in their hostile attempts against the island, and has been taught that useful lesson in a war with Great Britain, that, in defence of liberty, every British subject becomes a soldier."

"By the above happy event, the patriots are silenced, and prevented from pouring out the torrent of abuse they were ready to open against Ministry, for the loss of Jersey."

"Mons. de Lestevenon de Berkenroode, Ambassador from the republic of the United Provinces, notified at Paris, on the 29th of last month, that their High Mightinesses the States Generals had acceded to the convention of Armed Neutrality concluded between the northern powers. The French King gave an answer to the same, which is conformable in every respect to that given by his Majesty to the Courts of Russia, Denmark, and Sweden."

"Sir Joseph Yorke, Ambassador from the Court of Great Britain at the Hague, who, since his departure from that place, has resided at Antwerp, arrived at Brussels the first of this month, from which place he intends to return to Antwerp, and to wait for letters and fresh instructions from the British Ministry, and afterwards to return to Brussels, where he proposes to reside for some time. This may be depended upon from the best authority."

Lady Grant of Grant was this morning safely delivered of a daughter at Sir James Grant's house in the Canongate. Captain John Row, of the 85th regiment, died at Kingston in Jamaica, upon the 20th September last.

Died, at his house in Ayr, on Monday the 8th current, William Duff, Esq. of Crombie, Advocate.

James Carmichael, Esq. of Halk, Clerk to the Signet, died here last night, very much regretted. It is hoped the relations of the family will be so good as accept of this as a proper notification of his death.

This day, died here, in an advanced age, John Ogilvie of Pockneave, Esq.

Yesterday, his Majesty's proclamation, for making reprisals against the Dutch, was read at the Cross with the usual formalities.

A melancholy accident happened on the 10th current near Newtonstewart:—One Henderson, an exciseman, having information that some smuggled goods were to pass the road between Newtonstewart and New-Galloway, about that time, went with a party of eight soldiers, and waylaid them at the Saddle-loup, a hill over which the road passes, about four miles from Newtonstewart. The smugglers made their appearance about one o'clock in the morning, with six horses laden with tea and spirits, and had made some progress up the hill; but not stopping the moment they were ordered, or not hearing the order, the exciseman and party fired upon them, and shot Peter Macnair-fine, who was foremost, quite through the breast, who fell down and expired in a moment. This is the more affecting, as it is reported he did not belong to the smugglers, but was only the landlord of the house where they had lodged the night before, and was shewing them the road, as they were strangers to the country. He has left a wife and small family.—One load of the tea was only taken, the smugglers having made their escape with the rest. The exciseman and party passed by New-Galloway with the load taken, on the forenoon of the 10th.

The Neptune, Lang, from Clyde to Jamaica, and the Triton, Holmes, from ditto, to St Kitt's, were both taken the 22d December last, by the Tartar privateer of 30 guns and 200 men, Luke Ryan Commander. The Neptune is since taken by the Alarm and Vellal frigates, and is arrived at Ilfracombe.

Twenty-seven vessels, of various dimensions, were lying in the Carenage, Granada, when the late dreadful hurricane happened, 17 of which were lost, and the others greatly damaged. They were mostly Dutch, and loaded with sugar, cotton, and coffee.

The Ostich sloop of war, convoy to the Leith trade from London, run aground in Yarmouth Roads, and received so much damage, that she was obliged to return to Sheerness to refit.—The Oughton tender is arrived.—The remaining ships wait another convoy.

The Leith armed ship is arrived at Leith after conveying the fleet to London. She did not bring down the fleet for Leith, having no orders for that purpose.

Extract of a letter from Dublin, Jan. 6.
"The account published in the papers of the taking of the Tartar privateer by his Majesty's frigate the Stag, is entirely false, and took, probably, its rise from the Stag having, on her return from conveying the yacht with Lord-Backinghamshire on board, fallen in, in mid-Channel, with a Scots smuggler, furnished with a letter of marque; but on board of which a great quantity of brandy in anchors was found, commanded by Captain Nene. The Stag, after impressing all the crew to the number of forty, sent her for Liverpool. It is thought she will not be condemned, as she was not met within the prescribed distance of either the coast of Great Britain or Ireland."

"There is at this time in Dublin no less than three ex-Secretaries to Lord Lieutenants; a circumstance which never before happened in this kingdom. These are the Earl of Drogheda, Sir John Blaquier, and Sir Richard Heron."

"Thursday, Francis Kinslough, a combining journeyman tailor, was convicted before Aldermen Darragh and Shell, for quitting the work of Mr Lee, before the time for which he was retained expired: He was ordered to Bridewell to hard labour, pursuant to act of Parliament."

"Yesterday, the Heart of Oak armed ship, Captain Richmond, with thirty sail of transports under convoy for Corke, failed from our bay."

"Last week, died, near Ballynahinch, in the county of Down, Mr William Fergie; when he was put into the coffin he was weighed, the gross weight was about 600 awt. so that allowance being made for the coffin, he could not be less than 40 stone."

Extract of a letter from Captain Henry Hewitt, of the Beresford revenue cutter, dated Cuffie Townshend, Dec. 29.

"About twelve o'clock last Friday, a frigate-built ship fired three guns, and brought to a vessel a little to the eastward of this harbour, supposed to be a Newfoundland-man that failed from hence this morning: they both stood to sea together, S. E. In about an hour afterwards, two ships, that I took to be frigates, came down along shore from the westward, going to the eastward, but as the weather was hazy, I do not think they saw the other vessels."

Extract of a letter from Antigua, Nov. 7.

"On Wednesday last, arrived a large Spanish snow, prize to the Bassar cutter privateer, Captain Kennedy, fired out at Glasgow; the prize is loaded with soap, oil, olives, &c. when the snow left the privateer she was in chase of a large ship. The Captain of the prize claims the hull as Portuguese property, but allows the cargo to be Spanish."

Extract of a letter from a young Gentleman on board the Isis man of war, to his father in Edinburgh, dated Jan. 3.

"On our way to Portsmouth we fell in with and engaged a Dutch 64 gun ship; but, being short of our complement of seamen, and having no marines on board, were obliged to give up the engagement, after having damaged the enemy very much, and killed many of their men. Their Captain was wounded in the face. This we could plainly see, as we were yard arm and yard arm. We spoke to them before firing; indeed, they were very near aboard us. I was on the main deck in the heat of the action; for, after the first broadside, the Dutch struck their colours; upon which an universal hurra called me from the Cockpit, and all our men ran from their quarters. The enemy, however, immediately again hoisted their colours, and fired upon us, but did very little damage. One man was slightly wounded in the leg; but our main brace being shot away, we could not back our main-sail and top-sails, so as to lie to again; and, running a-head, soon lost sight of her. Our Captain and crew behaved with great bravery and spirit. Before the engagement, we captured a Dutch ship loaded with tobacco, but as it was in sight of many other men of war, our share of prize-money will be very trifling."

Thursday next, the 18th instant, being appointed for celebrating her Majesty's Birth-day, there will be an ASSEMBLY, beginning at Seven o'clock in the evening, and to continue weekly during the season.

Tickets to be had at Mr Richardson's shop in the Exchange, and at Mr Spinkie's (late Mr Mercer's) shop, opposite to the Tron Church.

The Monthly Meeting of the Lodge of LEITH KILWINNING, which ought to have been held last Monday, was, on account of the Mason Play, postponed till Monday next the 15th current, to meet at the Lodge at Larsson's at Six o'clock in the evening, of which the Brethren in Edinburgh and Leith will please to take notice.—This Lodge will continue to meet as formerly, on the Second Monday of the month.
